

Anondood the beloved artist felt out of place at the video game convention. Everyone else had on amazing costumes and the only thing he could get on such short notice was a t shirt that read "Otaku". He had won a random drawing he entered in a whim and was granted the tickets for free but the convention was the same weekend and he hadn't time to prepare. He felt left out as everyone showed off their amazing cosplay.

Then he happened upon a kiosk called "costumes for cheap". A couple of women who bore a perfect resemblance to Princess Rosalina and Tira from Soul Calibur ran the booth which resembled a photo booth. Tira collected money while Rosalina watched the machine. A fat, hairy nerd entered the photo booth. There was a flash and out stepped a petite woman dressed exactly like Sky from the Shantae games! Curious, Anondood approached the women.

"Looking for a costume, hun?" Tira asked, 'Five bucks and you can become a character of your choice!"

"How does it work?" The artist asked

"That's not part of the deal" she smirked

Uneasy but wanting to see the mysterious booth in action, Anondood paid and stepped inside. The inside resembled a photo booth or an arcade cabinet with a screen and a few simple controls. Cycling through the character selection, he found one he rather liked: Sayori from Doki Doki Literature Club. He pressed the "go" button and there was a bright camera flash.

As the spots cleared from his eyes, Anondood noticed the screen had changed its display: an adorable girl in a red bow and a schoolgirl uniform was rubbing her bright cyan eyes. He recognized that short pink hair anywhere: it was Sayori!

What was strange was the fact that Sayori was staring at him. Anondood lowered his hand and she did the same. He touched his hair and found it was longer than before and Sayori did the same. He looked down and saw a schoolgirl uniform concealing a woman's body! He was Sayori!

Nervously he...she stepped out of the booth to be greeted by the beaming faces of Rosalina and Tira.

"You look beautiful!" Rosalina cooed.

"I...I do?" Anondood asked in Sayori's voice. She agreed but didn't want to say it out loud.

"Yeah you do! You're wonderful." Tira said "Now get out there and have fun!"

It was heaven! Men and women all flocked to Anondood to admire her "costume" or to complement her looks or to ask for pictures. Afterwards Anondood, who had been highly encouraged to enter the cosplay contest by the others, ended up winning the grand prize because "she was just so darn cute!"

Money also became a non-issue as there were plenty of lonely and desperate nerds who bought her anything she desired, their only desire being to see her happy smiling face and throughout the whole con, Anondood had all the food, merchandise and positive accolades she could ever desire.